Type 2 Diabetes - Types And Symptoms Of Diabetes Mellitus

Type 1 diabetes mellitus is a disorder of metabolism caused by failure of the pancreas. This causes the body to be unable to absorb glucose, leading to high blood sugar levels. Type 1 diabetes mellitus is not preventable, but it is manageable with diet, exercise and medication. Below are the main types of diabetes:

Insulin dependent Diabetes Mellitus (IDDM) This used to be called "juvenile diabetes" because this type of diabetes usually begins in childhood or adolescence. It accounts for about 10% of all cases of diabetes. The cells in the pancreas that produce insulin are destroyed by the immune system so people with this disorder require insulin injections several times a day for survival.

Non-Insulin Dependent Diabetes Mellitus (NIDDM) This accounts for 90% of all cases of diabetes and is the most common type of diabetes. It usually begins after age 40, and affects overweight and middle-aged adults and children as well as people with a family history of the disease. NIDDM is brought on by diet, obesity and lack of exercise. This type can sometimes be controlled with diet and exercise alone, but some patients need to take oral medications or insulin injections to reach their target blood sugar levels.

Gestational Diabetes Mellitus (GDM) This type of diabetes is seen in pregnancy, usually during the last trimester. Between 2% and 5% of all pregnant women get this form of diabetes.

Other Types of Diabetes Mellitus: Diabetes caused by pancreatic problems such as cystic fibrosis, surgical removal of the pancreas, and pancreatic cancer.

Left-side—or Langerhans cell—disease. Rare, inherited form of diabetes that is more common in people with an Indian heritage. Like type 1 diabetes, it requires insulin shots and may lead to diabetic ketoacidosis without treatment.

Lipoatrophic diabetes: Inherited disorder in which there are excessive levels of fatty acids circulating in the blood along with unusually high levels of insulin due to damaged cells in the pancreas that produce insulin. More than 110 million people have diabetes, according to the International Diabetes Federation. That's 8.3% of the world's population, up from 6% in 1980. Rates are expected to nearly double by 2035. At least 80 percent of people with diabetes are thought to have type 2 diabetes, which is caused by obesity and lack of exercise. The loss of sensitivity of the cells that make insulin that occurs with aging is also thought to contribute to these long-term high blood sugar levels. Diabetes has become a more popular topic over the last decade because of its increasing prevalence and its direct effect on issues like heart disease, kidney failure, vision loss, amputations and even premature death.
